For FIFA 22, technology has been developed to help keep the game running smoothly for players with individual needs, in both offline and online modes. Next-gen FIFA will give players the ability to upgrade their players, and carry over (trade) players from FIFA 18 to FIFA 22. FIFA FOR MOBILE FIFA for mobile introduced several new features, including new and refined player kits, with a new look for the likes of Miroslav Klose, Luka Modric, Andres Iniesta, and former FIFA World Player of the Year, Lionel Messi. Other features of FIFA for mobile include: Instant Shot – Just tap the on-screen target of the current player in your team, and send it whooping into the top corner with a little flick of a finger. You can also hold the shot button to fire from the hip or slap a shot off-target. Player Control – Move your players in real-time to control the flow of the game. You can kick the ball to control player movement, pass it with one touch, or headbutt it to evade a defender. Team Management – One part of the game that we are continually improving is the management of your players. You can modify the contract of your players, taking up contract buy-outs, changing where your player is from the country league to the national team. We've also completely reworked the coaching of your team, giving you more real-time control over tactics and substitutions. And with new to FIFA for mobile, we've introduced Quick Shots. Tap to see the current match situation in full motion, and choose the next best play and release the shot button to shoot, tap to return the ball back to the goalkeeper, or tap to manually set your own shot. Advanced physics engine The new FIFA Engine features a new collision model, sophisticated animation and collision system, and over 10 million possible player movements and reactions. Players and other objects now can take more realistic angles and positions. Real Field of Play The new FIFA Engine can now simulate the field of play so that the players are never more than six yards away from the ball or any other player on the field. Even if a player is knocked off the ball during a tackle, the ball will always return to its original position. Interactions with the ball FIFA Interactions with the ball addresses the side effect of previous gameplay, where players sometimes moved even after the ball had stopped moving. A new velocity logic algorithm distributes the ball movement to the closest static players on the field. This significantly reduces the number of strange looking ball spin effects.
