Q: -bash: syntax error near unexpected token `(' Possible Duplicate: Background for (F)„Hacking” (Flooding) Explanation for the bash command `$((){ :;}; :)?` How do you debug shell scripts in bash? This is the result of a bash script I am working on: `#!/bin/bash ifconfig eth0 | grep inet | grep -v -w 127.0.0.1 | cut -d':' -f 1 | cut -d''-f 1` I'm trying to redirect the output of a file `/usr/local/sbin/procmail` to a file but this is the output: `-bash: syntax error near unexpected token '(' -bash: syntax error near unexpected token `('` I've searched the web for a solution and have gotten nothing. Can anyone help me with this? A: In your command, the first two lines appear to be valid bash syntax. It looks like your third line is a command written in another shell but which is converted into bash syntax by a script. That is the syntax error you're getting. In your script, it looks like you're trying to filter through several commands without a pipeline operator. For example, if I give you the following: `$ ifconfig eth0 | grep inet | grep -w 127.0.0.1` you get the same error you're seeing. This is because `grep -w 127.0.0.1` is a bash command, and `ifconfig eth0 | grep inet` is first trying to execute the `grep` command (and, if that fails, pipe the output to `grep`). What you want here is probably something like this: `ifconfig eth0 | grep inet | awk -F':' '/127\.\0\.\0\.\1/{print $2}'` which parses out only the second column of the first line of the output from `ifconfig`. You will probably have to play around with the `awk` command to get what you want. of the `$j-th`
